Dedication

For his great help to us during the past four years, we, the class of 1957, dedicate our yearbook to Kenneth A. Wheeler. As sophomores we were fortunate to have him as a class advisor, and since then his aid to our class has never ceased. He has been teacher, counselor, and friend.

Class History

We the class of 1957, who are about to board our ship of destiny, find ourselves remembering the things that our days at Grafton have given us, and recall every vivid detail of every memory shared by all.

It was on a bright and cheery September morning in 1953 that we began the first of our four high school years at GHS. After being settled in our new home, we proceeded to elect our class officers. President, John Hassen; Vice President, Beth Dame; Secretary, Judith Lundgren; and Treasurer, Anne Croteau. We were not allowed to hold a dance that year and so our main project was our class trip in June to Nantasket Beach, where a delightful time was had by all.

Upon entering our Sophomore year, we felt a bit surer of ourselves. We elected the same officers as in our Freshman year, and began making plans for our first dance—the Sophomore Hop—which was held in the Spring. With the smell of lilacs, we enjoyed our first dance in the school gym. As in our first year, our class trip was at Nantasket Beach.

With two years behind us we looked forward to the last two years, which will always have the most and best memories. Our Junior year brought with it many new projects, and under the leadership of our officers, President, Muriel King; Vice President, Roberta Caravalho; Secretary, Dolores Krula; and Treasurer, Nancy Foote, we began planning for them. The first function was the Harvest Moon Hop held in the Fall, followed by the Junior Cabaret under the direction of Miss Fontanella, Mrs. Newey, and Mr. Mohan. This was followed by the Junior-Senior Tea, under the chairmanship of Marina Mainini, and was held in the cafeteria with refreshments and entertainment provided by the Junior Class. During the time these functions were being held another committee was working unstintingly to prepare for the biggest event of the year, the Junior Prom. It was held on a beautiful night in June surrounded by an atmosphere of the Orient and sweet music. Our Queen was Kathy McKeon with her court of six lovelies; Carol Sampson, Joan Leland, Joanne Bates, Sue Carron, Beth Dame, and Pat Wenc. The wonder and delight of that night was carried over to the class trip the next day to Nantasket Beach.

Too soon we found ourselves beginning our final year at Grafton, with Mr. Sandberg and Mr. Doyle as class advisors. Faced with new goals, we were determined and eager to do our best in all endeavors. Class elections were as follows: President, John Hassen; Vice President, Beth Dame; Secretary, Betty Benoit; and Treasurer, Nancy Foote. Our first goal was to raise money for the costs of our Yearbook, which, under the direction of Kay Merrill, turned out to be a job well done.

Our first project was the Candy Sale in the Fall, which added a good-sized sum to our bank balance. The Freshman Reception was held in the Fall at which our younger sisters and brothers became acquainted with us at a tea in the school gym, where refreshments and entertainment were provided. Soon rehearsals began for The Senior Play under the direction of Miss Fontanella and Mr. Mohan. It included a fine cast. We held the second Senior Ball on December 28 in the gym. On the basis of their dependability, leadership, and personality, the class elected Roberta Caravalho, Queen and John Hassen, King. The attendants were Carol Sampson, Beth Dame, and Judy Lundgren. The boys selected were Reginald Ide, Donald Sanderson, and Richard Howarth. We also planned a trip with Mr. Sandberg to the State House in Boston. Throughout the year all of us had anticipated the coming of the two evenings never to be forgotten—Class Night and Graduation. Thus ended our four years at Grafton.

Looking back on the past years, remembering the times we have shared together, many of us regret having to leave. We are reluctant not only, or even primarily for the fun we have had, but are ever grateful for what we have learned through studying and working with people.

And so now we must leave, but in our hearts we hope those who have known us will not forget us just as we shall always remember you and dear old Grafton.

Last Will and Testament

- I, Nancy Babowitch, leave my silent manner to Shirley Jones, who I'm sure can make good use of it.
- I, Joanne Bates, leave with the Upton group.
- I, Laurent Belanger, leave my dislike for girls to Bruce Lapierre, in case he changes his ways.
- I, Elizabeth Benoit, leave my secretarial ability to Carol Pichette, who has the makings of a fine secretary.
- I, Louisa Berube, leave my artistic ability to Grace Messinese, with hopes that she follows an artistic pattern through life.
- I, Elaine Blondin, leave my long fingernails to Ann Kubiak, when she decides to stop biting hers.
- I, Jeannette Bonner, leave my talent for driving to June Walters, who already does pretty well.
- I, Rosair Boudreau, leave my musical ability to Donald Whitney.
- I, Roberta Caravalho, leave my outstanding versatility to Judith Hentz, who already has a good start.
- I, Elrid Carlson, leave my loyalty to Kresge's to Joan Gardner, who is following in my footsteps.
- I, Valerie Carlson, leave my long hair to Cecile LeBoeuf, when she loses her scissors.
- I, Sue Carron, leave my shyness to Judith Buzzell, in case she may ever need it.
- I, Carol Christian, leave my accuracy in bookkeeping to any worthy junior.
- I, Patricia Clark, leave my talent for selling AA membership cards to Constance Grenier, who might increase the sales by her enthusiasm for athletics.
- I, Anne Croteau, leave my hustling manner to that little ball of vitality, Beverly Ciccone.
- I, Arlene Cunningham, leave my flirtatious ways to Nancy Putnam, hoping she will always stay as sweet as she is.
- I, Beth Dame, leave my coal black hair to Ailene Matuzek.
- I, Lawrence Dunbar, leave my curly hair to John Wheelden, who can surely take advantage of it.
- I, Gail Faber, leave my love for nicknames to Lorraine Murphy, who already has quite a few.
- I, Cynthia Fadden, leave my height to that five foot blonde, Nancy Simoneau.
- I, Nancy Foote, leave my dislike for money to Cornelius Flynn, who is also class treasurer.
- I, Geraldine Fleming, leave my dramatic talent to Richard Auger, my future brother-in-law.
- I, Janice Fletcher, leave my Betty Crocker title to the next good housekeeper.
- I, Beverly Forsman, leave my loquacious manner to Ethel Bolack, the strong, silent type.
- I, Marilyn Francis, leave my petiteness to Joan Fisher, whenever she feels that she might need it.
- I, William Froment, leave my brother Leo to follow in my footsteps.
- I, Jeanne Giroud, leave my studious appearance to Richard Williams.
- I, John Hassen, leave my office as senior class president to be filled by a worthy successor.
- I, James Hayes, leave my basketball uniform to Cyrus Wood, who will never be able to fill it as well as I.
- I, Morton Hebb, leave my perfect posture to Maurice Hetu, in case he ever increases in size.
- I, Richard Howarth, leave with pleasure my ruby complexion to Richard Moore.
- I, Reginald Ide, leave with regret all the underclasswomen.

- I, Muriel King, leave my baton to Carol Campanalle, praying that she will always keep a firm hold on it.
- I, Charles Knowlton, leave my scientific ability to Alan Flamholtz, expecting that he will make good use of it.
- I, Dolores Krula, leave to marry Alan in June.
- I, Elizabeth Lamson, leave my outstanding laugh to Marsha Roney, assured that it will be much used.
- I, Judith Lundgren, leave my sparkling personality to Suellyn Pond.
- I, Rose Marie Lapierre, leave my perfect attendance in gym classes to Marie Laforce, in hopes that she will not ruin it.
- I, Walter Lawrence, leave my mischievous deeds along with my super book of ideas to Barry Ciccone.
- I, Joan Leland, leave to join the adventurous world and to seek my fortune far away.
- I, Pauline Lukas, leave my perfect conduct record to Nancy Holland, who will certainly need it.
- I, Donald Mahoney, leave my "luck" with cars to Gene Brosnihan, to use when he runs short.
- I, Austin MacLaughlin, leave my title as "the Bishop" to any junior who measures up.
- I, Louis Martin, leave my political debates to John Adams, hoping that he has better luck with them than I did.
- I, Margaret McAvoy, leave in a quiet manner to seek my life's ambition in this huge world.
- I, Kathleen McKeon, leave my ability to get along with teachers to Lloyd Nolan, knowing that it will come in handy.
- I, Kay Merrill, leave gladly my position as editor of the Compass to Daniel Clark.
- I, Donna Messier, leave my position as captain of the cheerleaders to Kay Richardson, hoping that she can cheer our boys on to victory in the next year.
- I, Patricia Metivier, leave my P.O.D. seat to my brother Michael, hoping he'll enjoy it as much as I.
- I, Carol Murphy, leave my Irish name to any well-deserving junior who would always cherish it.
- I, Gordon Nichols, leave my place at first lunch to Barry Lowe, hoping that he will be seen and not heard.
- I, Bruce Newton, leave my title as "Most Flirtatious" to Alan Peterson, feeling sorry that he will probably never have occasion to use it.
- I, Doris Paille, leave my motherly manner to Patricia Ryerson, wondering if she will be as patient as I have been.
- I, Raymond Peavy, leave my hot rod to Bruce Pratt, giving him the handy-dandy repair kit and a spare tire to go with it.
- I, David Perkins, leave my long legs to Norman Goulet, so that he may take big steps along the road to success.
- I, Susan Pond, leave my love for Elvis Presley to Mildred Dyson, in hopes that she will carry his great name on forever.
- I, Joan Quinn, leave my "Best Sport" title to Gail Bousquet.
- I, Phyllis Randall, am simply leaving.
- I, Rita Raymond, leave saying "good-bye" to all my classmates with regret that we must part.
- I, Donald Sanderson, leave my academic record to William Mae, assured that he can make good use of it.
- I, Carol Sampson, leave my large wardrobe to Barbara Grandpetro to add to hers.
- I, Gail Scobie, leave my memories of English class to Linda Ohman so that her memories will always be happy ones???

- I, Elaine Shilinsky, leave my gracefulness to David Troy, hoping that someday he may learn the meaning of the word.
- I, James Simoneau, leave my place on the varsity squad to John Fleming, who is coming right along behind me.
- I, Karen Stidsen, leave my beautiful blonde hair to Christina Morales, if she ever decides to change the color of hers.
- I, Nancy Sullivan, leave without my shorthand notes, hoping to never see them again.
- I, Marshall Temple, leave my love of jeeps to Richard Lamontagne, whenever he changes his make of cars.
- I, William Tessier, leave my knowledge of baseball and many other things to Floyd Danielson, in hopes that he will learn to express it clearly.
- I, Frank Thomas, leave my love of learning to Mitchell Zastawny, who should always treasure it.
- I, Judy Troy, leave my sportsmanship to Dorothy Huchowski.
- I, Patricia Wenc, leave my friendly attitude to all juniors.
- I, Fielden Williams, leave my black leather jacket to Robert Danielson, assuming that he will never be seen without it.
- I, John Zaleski, leave my dancing ability to Roger Gardzina.

Class Prophecy

I walked up the gangplank of the SS Graftonian, had my luggage taken care of and settled myself in a comfortable deck chair relaxing after a busy season on Broadway. As I sat back and closed my eyes I had a vision of my school days back at GHS. I knew Charlie Knowlton as a scientist, Morton Hebb, a dairy owner, and Reginald Ide, a successful farmer. Betty Benoit, Sue Carron, Carol Christian and Marilyn Francis were private secretaries.

Just then the captain of the ship, Captain James Hayes, came up to me and started telling me about some of his crew. Louis Martin and Walter Lawrence were First and Second Mates under Captain Hayes. Patricia Metivier was the social director and Beverly Forsman was the ship's nurse with Dr. Richard Howarth in charge. What a pleasant surprise to be with old friends again.

That night while dining with Jim, Pat and Bev, I experienced another surprise. On board the ship as the star vocalist for the entertainment of all, was Joanne Bates. She looked the same as I remembered with her long dark hair. Later in my stateroom I was thumbing through a magazine and I noticed the editor of the magazine was none other than Frank Thomas. I always knew Frank would succeed. I also noticed a picture of a drummer who was becoming world famous for his swinging beat and then I recognized Bill Froment. I had to look twice to believe it. Imagine, I know someone so famous. As I turned the pages I noticed some beautiful pictures and the names at the bottom of the page read Sue Pond and Louisa Berube. Upon further reading I realized that the names were of two girls from my class. I went to sleep with my pleasant thoughts.

While eating my breakfast the next morning I was looking through the paper and I saw a picture of John Hassen, a distinguished lawyer in a pose with Donald Sanderson, prominent engineer. I also noticed an article of nurses graduating and I found the names of Kathy McKeon, Anne Croteau, Nancy Babowitch, Judy Lundgren, and Pauline Lukas. I almost laid the paper down when a picture caught my eye. It was a picture of the teacher of the year, none other than our own Geraldine Fleming. The two runners-up were Pat Clark and Kay Merrill. Turning to the sports section I found an article on basketball players and Jim Simoneau who was co-captain of the Boston Celtics. Also in the sports section I noticed where Ray Peavey and Fielden Williams were racers and were going to be contestants in the cross country race. I went out for a walk on the deck later on, and while walking I noticed a bulletin board. Tacked on the board was a sign. "Learn to Dance The Right Way"; let our instructors John Zaleski and Patricia Wenc, graduates of Arthur Murray's dancing school, teach you the fun of dancing. I inquired further at the information booth and the clerk behind the desk was Jeanette Bonner. She told me where I could find Pat and John. I found them having a coffee break and they told me some more news of my classmates whom I had not seen for years. Don Mahoney had his own green houses and his flower business was blooming back in Grafton. His two assistants were Karen Stidsen and Gail Scobie. David

Perkins and Larry Dunbar were in attendance also. There were several girls in the class who had married; Roberta Caravalho, Dolores Krula, Gail Faber, and Betty Lamson. Four of the girls from my class had become models. They were Janice Fletcher, Donna Messier, Elaine Shilinsky, and Carol Sampson, who can be seen in all the leading magazines. The two Carlsons, Elrid and Valarie, had opened a beauty salon called Carlsons' Charm Cottage. I was quite amazed when I heard that Peggy McAvoy was a veterinarian. Rosair Boudreau was a country and western singer, singing for the Ozark Jubilee. You can hear him almost every night on the radio. Doris Paille, Nancy Sullivan and Jeanne Giroud were running a nursery school, and doing very well. Judy Troy and Joan Quinn had become physical education teachers. Five of my classmates were public accountants throughout Grafton. They were Carol Murphy, Rose Marie Lapierre, Joan Leland, Phyllis Randall, and Rita Raymond. Saying good-bye to Pat and John, and thanking them for their heartwarming tales from Grafton of some of my classmates. I left, only to bump into Elaine Blondin, Muriel King, and Arlene Cunningham who were also enjoying the voyage. Arlene and Elaine were secretaries and Muriel was dietician in a hospital. I said good-bye after a brief chat, and as I was walking by the ship's auditorium I heard the beautiful melody of an accomplished organist. Just as I hoped, it was Austin MacLaughlin. I saw Austin at dinner that evening and he told me that Cynthia Fadden was his agent and Beth Dame did all his arrangements. I commented on the delicious array of food before us and he told me why it looked and tasted so wonderful. The reason was that Laurent Belanger was the ship's chef, and great he was. I asked Austin why so many people from our class were with this particular ship, and he told me that in 1957 when they graduated, Gordon Nichols, Marshall Temple, Bruce Newton, and Billy Tessier had gone to Texas, struck oil, and bought the SS Graftonian, and this was the answer. As you can imagine, I thoroughly enjoyed the rest of the voyage on the ship.

Freshmen

As our four years at Grafton High School draw to a close, our thoughts turn to you as freshmen, who are just beginning your voyage on the sea of higher education. What the future holds depends on what is done with the many opportunities offered you. You will accumulate an abundance of knowledge, and gain many lifelong friends. As you mold your character, hold your ambitions high, and dream greater than happiness, dream service.

BATON TWIRLERS

Now that we have a band in the making we are beginning to train our baton twirlers. Under the direction of Janet Perron we are turning out some fine twirlers. As Janet is no longer with us, Carol Campanale and Muriel King are carrying on her fine work.

MIXED CHORUS

The mixed chorus under the direction of Miss DiVittorio proved very entertaining. They have provided music for many of our school functions and we are indeed proud to have an extremely good chorus.

GIRLS' GLEE CLUB

The Girls' Glee Club, under the always stimulating direction of Miss DiVittorio, was crowded with talent this past year and proved truly successful.

DISC JOCKEY CLUB

The Disc Jockey Club, recently organized under the sponsorship of Mr. Wheeler has proven one of the most popular and successful clubs in recent years. Lunch-time music is played, record hops are supervised by its members and new records are constantly being added to the collection. Congratulations!!

OUR TEAM

The Grafton High quintet did a most creditable job this season over obstacles that might have deterred others. Shortness of stature was more than compensated for by determination, courage, team spirit, and drive. The senior members of our team were: Captain, John Hassen, James Simoneau, and Gordon Nichols.

Coach Kelley can look forward to a fine team for the coming years as juniors and sophomores showed much promise. To coach, varsity and junior varsity we say — "Well done"!!

We must admit that the G.H.S. cheerleaders are partly responsible for this successful basketball season. Donna Messier as captain has done a wonderful job devising new cheers. Besides boosting the boys' spirit and desire to win, our cheerleaders have maintained a standard of sportsmanship that is truly a credit to our school.
